School District Not Sold on Educational Television

Local educators are studying possible use of educational television in Torrance schools, but still aren't sold on it, according to a report to the Board of Education Tuesday night. Although TV teaching has many possibilities, there are some drawbacks, according to Assistant Superintendent Albert Posner. These include:

1. Torrance schools have much good audio-visual equipment now, including films, filmstrips, records, pictures, and models. In many ways, use of these is better than TV.
2. Teachers would be limited and forced to follow the schedule required by the TV series. Instruction and other activities would have to be made to fit the TV schedules.
3. Programs filmed at the direction of local teachers would be better. The best system might be to obtain video-magnetic tapes and special equipment to show them. In this way, they could be shown when and if needed, and could be re-run.
4. Cost of installing and maintaining TV equipment would require either more money or cut-backs in other parts of the educational program.

"The staff will continue to study the potential and use of TV, but in the meantime, we will not be the first nor yet the last since so much money must be invested," Superintendent J. H. Hull said.
